Órla Fallon is a singer harpist who comes from the village of Knockananna in Co. Wicklow, Ireland.

Since leaving Celtic Woman at the end of 2008, Órla has been charting a solo path that launched this past December with her very own American Public Television holiday special – Órla Fallon's Celtic Christmas.

"I have been privileged in the places that music has brought me," says Órla Fallon. Given the places she's been these past years, it would be difficult to disagree. His Holiness the Pope, US Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush and Irish President Mary McAleese, have all been a part of Órla's audiences throughout these past six years, both as a solo artist and with the phenomenally successful group Celtic Woman.

"Playing in such places as the White House or the Vatican, you never realize when you're growing up that you'll ever see inside these places, let alone sing and play. I think that's the wonder of the whole thing. It's amazing the doors that music can open up for you!"
